ANNOUNCEMENTS

WHAT THEY'RE DOING AND WHY
Two New Acts and Four Photoplays Come to the Davis for the Last Three Days of the Week.

The new acts are Marion and Dean in a first class comedy singing and a novelty rope spinning act that comes very highly recommended; in fact, we are under the impression that these people have played here before and were very well received.
The Frisco of Finance, Mr. Pickwick's Predicament, His Windmill, Lovelock Madens and The Sledge Warblers sound like promises of more of the good things which The Davis is offering so regularly.
A slight change in the policy of the house has been made necessary because of the fact that now the schools have reopened many of the pupils can get to the theatre only on Saturday afternoon; this means a crowd so large as to make it unpleasant for the many "grown-ups" who wish to see the show on that day. Because of this, beginning on Saturday and continuing until further notice, there will be two shows given on each Saturday afternoon, the first at 1:30 and the second at 2:15.

ENTIRE NEW SHOW

At the Auditorium Today.

The bill at the Auditorium today contains all new acts, none of them ever having been seen in this city before. The acts are all evenly divided as to merit, and while there is no special headliner, a good, strong all-around bill is assured.
Port and De Lacey present a very high class comedy specialty that is both witty and musical, and an act that will appeal to who appreciates a first class act.
The picture feature for today as usual is the wonderful Gaumont Weekly. The Auditorium is the only house that is able to show the Weekly every week on the same night, bringing to the audience the latest in the season. This week's shows: A slide for life from a 26-story building; the first of the new double-deck cars in New York city; an aviation meet in France showing some new hyperplanes in advance models of the latest military styles from Paris (shown in colors), and many other new and interesting items.

BREED THEATER.

"Freed From Suspicion," Magnificent Dramatic Feature Picture.

Quite out of the ordinary is the sensational feature picture at the Breed today, entitled Freed From Suspicion. It is a Kalem production of the highest type, and has on its cast of characters the names of such popular players as Charlie Blackwell, Alice Joyce, Jane Wolfe and William West. The plot revolves around a dishonest housemaid, whose thefts are laid to the door of the youthful admirer of the daughter of the house. Simply by chance, the maid is detected in her pilfering, and the innocent lover is freed from suspicion.
The Desert Sandstorm, one of the clearest and brightest Lubin pictures ever shown in this city, is brimming over with interest and excitement. Its scenes are laid in the vicinity of the Great American desert, and it is upon this that the fleeing couple is caught and overwhelmed by the sandstorm and storm. A superb rural scenery by the Edison company wins the hearts of all.

Kingston Fair.

The Kingston fair, held by the Washington County Agricultural society, opened Tuesday.
Numerous changes about the grounds, which confused even the old-time residents of that section of the state, and the presence of an alshrub are conspicuous features.
This year there are nearly 900 exhibitors, with a total of over 4,000 individual entries. This alone gives some idea of the size of the fair.
As a whole, the event is fully up to that of last year, which was one of the best in the history of the society. Cattle of all kinds, fruit, flowers and the product of women's needles occupy conspicuous places. In addition to these there are many other exhibits that attract the attention of visitors, no matter whether they come from the city or country.
Probably the biggest attraction on the grounds is in line with past years, is the cattle show, and this is fully up to the standard of other fairs. Some of the finest specimens of the leading butter and milk breeds are in the pens, notable among them being the herd of thoroughbred bylines from the state school for feeble minded at Exeter, entered for exhibition only.
An added attraction has been made by the management in the appearance of a flying machine, the first thing of its kind to make an appearance in the South county. Miss Ruth Law, who flew at Narragansett park on Labor day, is scheduled to make two flights, the first on Thursday afternoon, Governor's day, and the second Friday morning. The 40-horsepower Standard-Wright biplane is on exhibition in a big tent.
A room adjoining the exhibition hall has been set aside as a retiring and rest room for women and children. It is fully equipped for comfort.

CONFERENCE OF SIX CHURCHES

A cheerful giver. Dr. Jewett says: No one can grow fine graces in lean souls. The church will outlive the persecution of selfishness, of avarice and greed. God is still meeting His gospel through the channels of the church, through the inspiration of human minds and guidance of human hands over the continent. The keynote to Christianity is not What can I get? But How much can I give?
There were several brief addresses on the subject before the conference closed.

Our Fighting Men.

Statistics show that there are 20,478,683 men of fighting age in the United States. Among these may be mentioned Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania.—Manchester Evening.

Hardly Probable.

It sounds just like that Standard Oil crowd—to give up $100,000 without knowing whether T. R. knew. Now, doesn't it?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Because He Loved Children.

If Roosevelt didn't ask Harriman to raise that money, how did Harriman come to do it?—Philadelphia Record.

Danbury.—Judge Eugene C. Dempsey has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-nomination for the office of Judge of Probate for the district of Danbury and New Fairfield.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Money Fifty Years Ago.

Mr. Editor: During the civil war the money power partially lost the ownership and control of money. From 1792 to 1861 it had absolute control of all money (gold and silver) under free coinage, and of the paper currency (state bank bills). From 1861 to 1863, from the treasury department on page 18 is given: "The first paper money issued by the government of the United States was authorized by the act of congress July 17 and August 5, 1861. These notes were called 'demand notes.' Fifty million dollars were authorized by the two acts. February 12, 1862, another $10,000,000 was authorized. These notes were not legal tender when issued, but on March 17, 1862, they were made full legal tender." These notes were said to be payable in gold or coin, on demand. In December, 1861, the government and the banks both suspended specie payments. The demand notes depreciated to 80 cents on the dollar. As said above, March 17, 1862, the demand notes were made a full legal tender, and when it took 285-1/2 dollars of the greenbacks (with the word except on them) to get $100 of gold, it took 285-1/2 dollars of said greenbacks to get $100 of demand notes. They were worth more than gold, because they would do all that gold money would do and more convenient. This is positive proof that the legal tender prevents the depreciation of paper money. These notes did not depreciate as long as the government had the gold to pay them when demanded. But when the government suspended, or refused to pay in coin, they went down to 80 cents on the dollar. As soon as Congress made them a legal tender for all debts they were as good as gold—yes, better than gold, notwithstanding the fact that the government had no gold to redeem them with, and notwithstanding the promise to pay on demand still remained on the notes, which further proves that the law of legal tender annuls all promises to pay. Payment kills the promise to pay, because legal tender is pay.

This is also proof that if the 150 millions of greenbacks authorized February 25, 1862, had been made a full legal tender they would not have depreciated. It looks like a scheme to get rid of the 40 million dollars of legal tender demand notes, for 50 millions of the 150 millions of "except" greenbacks was to take the place of the demand notes. By July 1, 1863, $54,330,000 of the demand notes were destroyed, and nearly three times more were destroyed before July 1, 1864. By the destruction of the full legal tenders, and substituting the "except" greenbacks, the government's creditors' goldiers received only $14.59 to the month instead of $13. The strange and curious part of it is that the government compelled all creditors to receive this purposely depreciated greenback at its face value, and would not take it from the creditor at its face. The bondholders were not obliged to take it for interest, but the government sold its bonds and took the greenbacks at their face. Can anyone explain why this was done? The importers had to pay the premium on gold to pay the duty to the government.

The Third Term Question.

Mr. Editor: For its bearing on the third term question, as well as upon Mr. Roosevelt's meaning when he declared that he should not be a candidate for re-election, it is instructive to recall a little history.
At the expiration of his second term as president, General Grant went abroad and was received with great distinction by crowned heads, statesmen and warriors. Upon his return home grows more rapidly with attention abroad. As he traversed the continent from the Pacific eastward, upon his return, he was everywhere welcomed with enthusiasm and popular enthusiasm and socialism as our foremost citizen. His great and inestimable services for his country had made him illustrious; criticism and opposition aroused during his two terms of service had been forgotten or obliterated. Senators Conkling of New York, Cameron of Pennsylvania and Logan of Illinois headed the movement to control these three great states and nominate General Grant in triumph. Perhaps the respect and affection in which he was held by the people generally was brought out in stronger light because General Hayes' administration, though sound, wise and able, was not brilliant or spectacular. Why was not General Grant nominated in 1880 rather than a "dark horse"? Because of the deep-seated conviction against a third term in the Presidency. But for that, he would have been nominated with unanimity. Parallel to the case is Mr. Roosevelt, a term had intervened. Even his three mighty captains, with public sentiment intensely friendly, grateful and appreciative towards the popular hero, could not have saved him from defeat. The contention had not been thought of that an intervening term did away with the rule. Upon the first ballot in the republicans' convention, held there, it was this year, in Chicago, Grant had 304 votes, Blaine 284, Sherman 98, Edmunds 34, Washburne 30, Windom 10 and Garfield 1. The 304 stood by their candidate with the firmness of the Old Guard to the last, making the number historic, but to no purpose. Principle had conquered.
It was believed when that convention adjourned, and ever since, now, that the question of a third term was forever settled—rightly settled and at rest. Were the people wrong then? The precedent established by Washington had received its final confirmation. Has any occasion arisen for overruling it?

POETRY

PROUD.

Say, you little wide-eyed fellow,
You are scarcely two months old;
And you may not know your daddy
Thinks you're worth your weight in gold.
And you may not know that when he
Takes you up and starts to sing,
That he's happy to have you
Than some European king.

You have scarce begun to notice,
And of course you cannot see,
You're the source of all the gladness
There is in living to me.
And of course you do not know it,
If you did, you wouldn't care,
Having you, you're my old
